ATUMANYE NOBERT

1.0 INTRODUCTION

Chapatti flying has been a good earning job in Uganda , because people doing that job have managed to earn much from it , they have managed to set up assets due much money earned from the job.

They have different ways in which they sell many chapattis; through making kikomando , which made by putting flid beans in chapattis, another way is by flying Rolex, which is made by combining eggs with chapattis and some greens to make flavors . In addition to making kikomando and making Rolex, chapatti fliers also make pizza to raise the money.

I have been able to interview many boys around my location trying to know how they the handle the job, how much they make in a day, how they try to sustain with costs of living because of the cheap works.

But however, they were able to convince me with various ways in which they try their level best to cope up with the challenging Uganda.

However the chapatti makers encounter some problems which hinder their needs and make life complicated as we shall see in next subjects.

1.1 BACKGROUND

There are many problems encountered by the people doing the chapatti making job. They include; the lack of enough money to develop the work place in order to make the services perfect, they still claim this as a most challenging effect. They also claim that costs of living are too challenging because the rent is too expensive to be managed by such low income earners, they find it too challenging to get rent from the little money earned.

They also find it hard to find their breakfast, lunch and supper, as well as save for their well-being. Even getting enough customers in a day is hard which leads to reduced income earned in a day.

Overall in general, it is too challenging for such people to come up with improving Uganda, hence bringing the balance of people in terms of money.

Sometimes some boys are just hired to work as chapatti attendants, in this case they don't earn much. Hence the high cost of living, this is too hard to cope up with the challenging Uganda.

Even prices of commodities are too high hence putting life to a standstill.

1.2 OBJECTIVES

1.2.1 MAIN OBJECTIVES

The most prevailing challenge faced by the chapatti handlers is the rising prices of commodities, especially the ingredients they use to make chapattis like wheat flour, yeast, cooking oil, salt, eggs and others. Some of these ingredients are too costly hence making the chapatti handlers fail to handle.

1.2.2 SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

It is too challenging for chapatti handlers to cope up with the rising Uganda, the prices of commodities are rising to an unexpected way, hence making the costs of living too hard to manage. The cost for rent is also rising, hence making these people unable to finance their needs.

The unpredictable customers also lower the income earned, the customers reduce due to weather and income they have, if their income reduces then the demand for chapattis also reduce.

These people also find it too hard to get the suitable peace with conducive atmosphere and with many customers to increase their income.

The government also doesn't put in mind in helping these people by put across laws that may favor these people, they are often chased from the road side, hence leaving them out with nowhere to go and continue with their business.

1.3 PROBLEM STATEMENT

The rising prices of ingredients have lowered the income earned by chapatti handlers, the eggs are too hard and yet they are needed when making Rolex, and beans are also too high priced on markets and yet they are needed in making kikomando. As I interviewed, many chapatti handlers told me that kikomando has a high demand and yet beans are too high.

This is a challenge and these people often find it hard to deal with it.

The commodities are also too high for these people to manage hence making costs of living too hard to manage, leaving them with little money to spend on rent and save for future projects.

And yet they are supposed to save for their future wellbeing, but which is too hard to be attained by these low income earners.

1.4 METHODOLOGY

The prevailing hindrances have therefore been overcome by improving the customer care hence increasing the number of customers thus increased income as well as the improved cost of living.

The other way of overcoming, some boys who are the chapatti makers told me that they have formed some organizations in which they save in their daily made money to cope up with the highly rising prices of commodities.

This is therefore of great benefit to these guys because they have been able to save to save and plan for the future.

They have also been able to find well reached places at which the customers can access them.

So far too good, this is going to make the a nice and inspiring generation, actually I was affected by some boys who make chapattis that they have tried to be patient and try their level best to put all their efforts in the work they are doing, hence increased income.

Because they say patience pays, they have been able to earn much.

Hence an inspiring generation and growing Uganda as well.

1.5 LITERATURE REVIEW

In common with people's wishes, they have been able to improve their ways of living through their earnings from selling chapattis.

This is a great success to most people who see their level of life to earn from such a job.

Uganda's newspapers in Late February 2017, they were addressing the selling of Rolex which has also been adopted by outside countries, and then some people leave their countries to Uganda to see and learn how Rolexes are made.

And this is of great importance to Ugandans and people selling them since increased income and improved standards of living.

Most books have been written teaching and giving tips on how chapattis are made.

Describing the ingredients to use the directions on how to use them and the measurements hence improving on the quality and service.

The improved services help to improve on the well-being of citizens and incomes of chapatti sellers.
